

Christmas season has officially arrived with the Palais Hindu Christmas World Expo

For many on Aruba the true start of the holiday season takes place when Karina Daryanani of Palais Hindu unveils her Christmas collection for the year. One would never guess how chic and elegant Christmas tree and home decoration could be until making a trip to the shop in Eagle and seeing what is on display. “Ohh’s” and “ahh’s” were heard from many a child upon casting their eyes on the breathtakingly beautiful trees and decorations that took days of hard work to set up. Even Santa and Mrs. Claus, who greeted those that came to see the collection last Sunday, were quite impressed!

Whether one’s taste is more traditional, or modern and “funky,” Palais Hindu revealed a style and color scheme to match any and every home. From Victorian style tea roses and angels, to decorations that were thoroughly modern liberated women with funny sayings, the various objects that are now available for Christmas are amazing, and contain everything needed to produce a color coordinated holiday home. The beauty of peacocks, whether in frosty white or actual peacock feathers was a favorite theme, and there were glittery decorations galore. For the Daryananis, the Sunday debut of their Christmas collection is a family affair, and they enjoyed being hosts to everyone that wouldn’t miss it for the world!
